

ROBERT H. EBERT, M.D., currently president of the Milbank Memorial Fund, began his career with 10 years at his alma mater, the University of Chicago Medical School, then, after 10 years as Hannah Payne Professor of Medicine at Case-Western Reserve University, he became Jackson Professor of Medicine and in 1977 dean at Harvard Medical School. He has served as director or trustee of the Rockefeller Foundation, the President's Biomedical Research Panel, the Advisory Committee to the National Institutes of Health, and the National Library of Medicine.

WILLIAM ELLINGHAUS in 40 years rose to be president and chief operating officer of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. His contributions to the government and private sectors are astonishing, including directorships of Bell Laboratories, the National Urban Coalition, and the Boy Scouts.

AUGUST SWANSON, M.D., after graduation at Harvard Medical School and a career at the University of Washington, has for the past 12 years been director of the Department of Academic Affairs of the Association of American Medical Colleges. He is a member of the Goals and Priorities Committee of the National Board of Medical Examiners and of the Liaison Committee on Graduate Medical Education.

CHRISTOPHER C. YORK, ESQUIRE, after training in Russian and Mandarin, took a degree in international law at Emory University and, while in the army, was a military judge. He is now a legal officer and assistant manager for corporate planning at Citicorp. His service to the Task Force on National Health of the Business Roundtable has been concerned with the cost management of health care delivery.

Erratum

In the January-February 1984 issue of the Bulletin, the title on page 48 should read: THE NEW ERA OF UTILIZATION AND QUALITY CONTROL: PEER REVIEW ORGANIZATIONS. Also, on page 50, 10th line up from the bottom, the word "professional" should be "peer."
